week. The rental of four dollars a month for a four-room house would appear to be reasonable.

All the business houses of the town are controlled by the company. Among these is the largest general store I have ever seen in Virginia.

The town is governed by a mayor and Town Council chosen by the people, though there are no landlords among the citizens. There is a jail as well as as a courthouse, and there has been no complaint that the calaboose is too little occupied. There is a police force, and the best order imaginable is maintained.

There is no liquer sold in the town, and it is the fixed intention of the company to prohibit its sale forever. This determination largely explains the policy of the management in holding all the land, as in this way only can it be made certain that it will always be a prohibition town. There is a Methodist Church in the town, but the other sects have not yet appeared.

THE SCHOOL.

THE SCHOOL.

The people of Fries are proud of the public school, which they claim is the lest in this section of the country. The town levy for the support of the school would maintain it but a few months every year, but the amount needed to keep the school open ten months is supplied by the company. As there are nother industries to keep children under twelve years employed, even were it not for the State law which keeps children from working in factories, the attendance is large and general. I observe there is no lack of children in Fries.

Mr. Z. T. McKinney, who is the super-intendent of the cotton mill, told me today the output of the factory this year would reach the enormous total of 22,000,001 yeards. The amount of cotton consumed this year'will aggregate 17,000 bales. The cotton used comes from all over the South. It is hauled by the Southern to Fries. Less than fifty miles to the south is the line of the Southern at Mt. Arry. The hint indicates the tend of mind of every man familiar with the conditions and the locality at Fries with reference to railroad facilities, and the need of improvement. I predict that it will not be very long until the Southern has a branch line to the town and the cotton will be brought more directly to the mills.

GOOD WAGES.

But this is all by the way. I was talk-GOOD WAGES.

GOOD WAGES.

But this is all by the way. I was talking of the people of Fries. Mr. McKinney, who is from South Carolina, and an old cetton mill man, told me that the wages paid here are better than are paid in any mill of the South of which he knows. The people give every evidence of being well paid for their services. There is an air of prosperity everywhere. Some of of prosperity everywhere. Some of houses have gardens attached, and all of these are worked most carefully, for, as may be imagined, the price of vegetables brought by train for fifty or skry miles is very high. But the fact that there are a few gardens, the gardens so neatly tended, lends an air of thrift to the town that is most noticeable. It was most significant to me that in a great many instances part of the preclous garden space was devoted to the culture of flowers. It is to the credit of the cotton mill company that nothing additional is charged the renier who happens to get a house with garden attached.

There is not a manufacturing town in America so wildly located as is Fries, but as there is none which was built the miller of the cotton mill company that not yet fully realized the miller is not a manufacturing town in America so wildly located as is Fries, but as there is none which was built the miller of the cotton of the company in locating so fair from the he company in locating so fair from the he company in locating so fair from the he company in locating are much closer to the outside world, almost the only evidences of the presence of man in the world which are to be found in this locality is the town. The country surrounding is as rugged as any I have seen in Virginia, and about the most rugged portion was selected for the silve of the mill and town. The mountry surrounding the lower edge to the mill and town to the bailt on a mill the town it exists in the upper end of the town, and the railroad runs along the lower edge to the mill and looks up the river he cannot help feeling surprise at seeing people coming down the stream from above the mill, of course, and as one stands at the mill and looks up the river he cannot help feeling surprise at seeing people coming down the stream from above the mill company is not trying to misk endes to the scene beauties of the place, however valuable these may be to proprietors of mountain notels. A RACE WITH DEATH

TIED FOR THE WEAPON

Some Remarkable Shooting by East End Club.

AFTER A HANDSOME GUN

Contest Will Probably Be Concluded Next Saturday-Richmond Wins the Team Race With Ashland's Club.

The attractive programme of the East Find Gun Club yesterday attracted the largest crowd of "scatter-gun artists" of the year. Thirty-three shooters faced the traps. Several shooters from a distance were present, among them Mr. E. W. Banford, of Blackstone, the runner up at Lynchburg for the championship of the State. Members from West End, Northside, Ashland and Albemarle clubs were present.

The handsome take down Winchester shotgun brought forth twenty-nine entries, and some excellent scores were made, noticeably Mr. R. Johnson, who lost by shooting at a broken target. Hechler, Cox and "W. Schultze" shot in great form, attributing it all to Peters' Ideal shells and "Schultze" powder.

This was arranged on an added handicap or dead bird basis, giving the pooreshots the same advantage that the "scratch" men have. With but few exceptions this was very satisfactory to the contestants, hence but little "kicking." In the first string, seven tied with a prefet evere heavilence added. In the contestants, hence but little 'kloking.'

In the first string, seven tied with a perfect score, handleaps added. In the shoot off two lost out, Messrs. Hechler and Baker, leaving Cary, Witshire, J. T. Johnson, Cox and Boudar still tied. In all probability these ties will be shot next Saturday on the same

In all probability these ties will be shot off on next Saturday on the same grounds.

THE TEAM RACES.

The last and most interesting part of the programme was the team races at twenty-five targets, for a beautful loving cup, donated to the clubs of the Captal City League, by the Peters Car tridge Company.

There were but two teams to contest for the cup-Ashland and East End. Ashland won the toss, and faced the traps first, thereby getting the advantage of the light, as twilight was fast getting in evidence. They shot very well, however, especially Mr. Cox, and Dr. Bagby. They shot from skiten yard line and finished with 95 to their credit. East End was very materially handicapped by the lateness of the hour, also having to shoot from seventeen yard line, and at an elevation of, say, two feet. They started off to win, each man breaking his first five straight, It looked like "getting money from home" to keep on, so the first change, Anderson, who was picked to make a good showing for his club, instead of pulverizing the targets, failed to locate target after target, and landed with only 15 opposite his name. This gave the same fever to Boudar, who lost five in the next ten, and gathered himself in time to save the club from defeat.

P. J. Flippen went down the line, misjudged the ninth and eleventh hirds, and pulverized the rest, thus saving East End from a Waterloo.

WORK PROGRESSES ON THE CATHEDRAL

Sections of Walls Ten Feet High-Idea of Immensity of Building Realized.

Parts of the walls of the Catholic Ca-Laurel Street and Park Avenue, are ten feet about the sidewalk. The real immensity of the structure now begins to appear. It will cover far more space than any sanctuary in the city, and as the means at the disposal of the builders much greater than Richmond church builders usually have, the sacred edifice

The architect's plans were drawn of $250,000. When the design was finished and the contractors had submitted their estimates, it was seen that the work, as planned, could not be done for the quarter of a million donated by Mr. Thomas F. Ryan. This blocked the enterprise for a while. Nothing was done except probably the architect was worrying about how he could lop off this and that and reduce the cost. Finally Mr. Ryan, a native of Nelson county, of excellent Virginia stock, and by no menas accustomed to do things half way, said, or is reported to have said: "Go on with the work, and I'll take care of the cost." The result is that Richmond will have a cathedral that will be exceedingly handsome, and will be to this city what the massive and beautiful St. Patrick's is to New York. It will be several years before the cathedral will be completed.

Ancarraw, who was recently awarded the contract for the erection of a part of the Virginia State Insurance office building at the corner of Fifth and Main Streets, on the site of the house creeted early in the century by Major Gibbon, the hero of Stony Point, and for many years the residence of the late Moses D.
